

New Delhi, April 24, 2014: There was an attempt to breach the security of the naukri.com site on the 16th of April in the wee hours of the morning. These attacks seem to have emanated from Russia. As a precautionary measure we immediately reset the passwords of our jobseekers and in order to ensure safety of the data we also suspended the login, registration, edit, forgot password and apply functionality of the site for a few hours .

We displayed a message communicating this prominently across all the touch points of the site. An emailer has been sent to jobseekers informing them about this development and advising them to change their passwords.

The employer/ recruiter side of the website was not affected in any manner by this incident . We have upped our security infrastructure ,operational control and vigilance in the wake of the rise in the recent attacks on websites across the world.
